I have a few, bought 'em new from UK dealers, and they're the best cars I've ever accomplished in. ----- gte910h They're mostly cars from the late 70's-early 90's Re-establishment of the circadian system in rats after major hepatectomy. Changes in the circadian system of rats were examined after hepatectomy, and the effects of hepatectomy on gastric temperature and the circadian phase of the gastric temperature rhythm were examined. Major hepatectomy, 70% of the liver was removed, was performed on male Wistar rats. The rats were anesthetized with an i.p. injection of ketamine hydrochloride (50 mg/kg) and acepromazine (2.5 mg/kg), and the operating microscope and low stereotactic device (Ai-Kether Co., Osaka, Japan) were used to perform the hepatectomy. The circadian phase of the gastric temperature rhythm was determined by the cosinor method. Before hepatectomy, when the room was maintained at 23 degrees C, the circadian phase of the gastric temperature rhythm was phase-delayed by 2-3 h relative to the diurnal activity of the rat, compared to at night. After the operation, the rats were examined at the following time points: 0 and 12 h after the hepatectomy; and 1 and 7 days after the hepatectomy. In the rats with hepatectomy, the circadian phase of the gastric temperature rhythm was phase-advanced. However, even in the liver-removed rats, the circadian phase of the gastric temperature rhythm was delayed for several days after the hepatectomy, and after 7 days, it was similar to that before the hepatectomy, indicating the re-establishment of the circadian system.
